Public housing residents will benefit from a new development recently completed in Parramatta. Replacing four old cottages, this complex comprises twenty-four units over three levels, including basement car parking and a lift to service all levels. The design includes four fully modified disabled units and two that can be adapted to meet future residents special needs.

A feature of the property is the internal courtyard that combines the requirements of private areas and common open space by the use of strategically placed raised planters and privacy screens. The building façade is a combination of mansard metal roofs, mini orb metal cladding, coloured granosite panels and face brickwork.
